

Sudan: Humanitarian Update (May 12, 2023)

Violence Drives Displacement, Exacerbates Humanitarian Needs

- An estimated 736,000 people have been internally displaced since the April 15 violence began and more than 204,000 refugees and refugee returnees have fled Sudan. The new displacement comes on top of an existing displacement crisis of 3.8 million internally displaced Sudanese, 1.1 million refugees hosted in Sudan, and nearly 830,000 Sudanese refugees in neighboring countries.
- UNHCR is anticipating $445 million will be needed to assist arriving refugees and returnees in five neighboring countries until October. This is in addition to the existing 2023 UN humanitarian appeals, including $1.7 billion to assist 12.5 million people in Sudan.
- The price of food, fuel, and water is increasing and access to healthcare has been severely impacted. Aid organizations report a 1,251% increase in fuel prices and an increase by 100% or more in wheat flour, rice, and sugar prices in Khartoum.

Inter-communal conflict has picked up in West Darfur, according to IOM.

*Refugee arrivals and projected arrivals include refugees of Sudanese origin, third country nationals, and destination-national returnees.
**Previously hosted refugees represent populations prior to April 15 and include Sudanese refugees and asylum-seekers only.
